“ We send our condolences to TJ and Andrea and your families. I appreciate all Uncle Terry did for the family, especially how he stepped in as a father figure so many years ago. Family was so important to him and I always appreciated how he remembered to send birthday cards from him, Betty and the girls (a.k.a. the dogs) every year throughout my childhood. I always enjoyed seeing him at family gatherings and will miss him at those to come. --Kelly Grillo

“ Terry, my big brother. Not sure where to start. Mike and Tom related some details. How meticulous he was with drawing and drafting. His love for his family. Besides quitting school to help the family, he escorted me down the aisle at my wedding..... a young “father of the bride” at 27. Terry was a peaceful man. Did not like confrontations. Maybe all of us Hahns are a little like that, but felt family was important to stay connected. And we did that, long distanced. He loved sharing stories when we talked on the phone, mostly about his grandchildren. He was quick with a smile or laugh and had great memory of stories from our youth. You younger folks think of him as slow moving, but that wasn't always so. When he played softball with a Laclede Gas team, he earned nickname The Rabbit because he could run bases so quickly. Over the years, that was shortened to The Everyone has there own memories of Terry. Keep him in your heart and your prayers. We love you Terry and will miss you, but know you are in a much better place.you will always be in our hearts. Carolyn

“ our recent trip to Springfield. to visit Terry was just another reminder of the special bond that exists between our siblings. I have always been very proud of that bond and the relationship we have. Terry and I recently spoke about our memories from many Cardinal baseball and football games we attended together. Terry had a special skill for detail that showed up in everything including the train layout he made in the basement on Bessie Ave, and the system he made for keeping score of baseball games we listened to on the radio{no TV broadcast at that time}.Even though we lived in different states the last few years, I still felt that bond. I always appreciated having an older brother, and am having a difficult time accepting the world without. him. It left a hole I my life that will only be filled. when we are together again in Heaven. I'll always love you.....your brotherTom

“ I often tell a story about Dad that pops up when having discussions about movies or more specifically favorite movies. You see, my favorite film of all time is the Raiders of the Lost Ark. Sure it’s a great film, but its more about the experience Dad and I had seeing the movie in theater when originally released.

As I recall it, Dad picked me from Mom’s house a little before scheduled start time. I think Mom wanted to be helpful and she wanted to make sure we had a great time, so she made popcorn at home - a large amount of popcorn. I mean, she filled half a black garbage bag with popcorn. When she handed it to Dad, he accepted it albeit with slight hesitation. You could see Dad’s brain instantly trying to figure out how he was going to sneak a trash bag of popcorn into the theater. Eager not to disappoint, he accepted the bag while offering gracious thanks.

So here’s me and Dad walking into the theater to watch Raiders of the Lost Ark - Dad has a zipped up jacket with a large “belly” or more specifically, large black trash bag full of popcorn zipped under jacket. It was so obvious. Several people looked awkwardly at us like - “do you really think you’re fooling anyone?” We just looked at each other and laughed. So, there we sat watching Indy’s adventures with a black trash bag sitting between us - sharing a trash bag of popcorn. I gotta say - that popcorn was delicious. Thanks mom!

So yes, Raiders of the Lost Ark is my favorite movie primarily because of that bonding experience with Dad. But also because Dad is my Indiana Jones - he is my unstoppable hero. Oh and of course, like Indiana Jones - Dad has a thing for hats, so I always thought that was just perfect.

I love you, Dad.

“ Hi big brother - you will be missed. You were always a big part of my life, even giving me rides to High School in the morning on your way to work. You stepped up for the family having to drop out of college after Dad died to help support our family. That was a big sacrifice on your part. You taught me a lot about supporting our home town Cardinals (not those Cubbies - sorry I had to say that) (I just found out that Dad was a Cub Fan) and teaching me how to keep score. That was huge at that time for me. I know you stuck around longer than you thought, I just wish it would have been longer. We're just glad we got to see you before you got sick. I wish you could have enjoyed life a little more fully lately. Say Hi to Mom & Dad, Ed & Hugh. Look out for me & my family.
Love Mike

“ It was always a fun time whenever Terry visited us in the Chicago area. We always enjoyed him even though he was a staunch Cardinal fan (in CUBS territory!). Love you, Terry.

“ Dear Andy, T.J., Amy and Family,

My deepest Sympathy to all of you. Terry was such a strong support for the whole family,

This shows in the loving obituary. That was Terry.

His bright smile and sparkling eyes showed his love for you all.

We all honor his life.
